PEKING MAY NAME TUCHUN LI SHUN CHIEF DELEGATE

Offer Said To Come From Chin Yun-peng Who Will Be Premier

PRESIDENT ACTS

Steps Taken To Appoint Permanent Cabinet To Effect Peace

HEAR FROM WANG

Anfu Chief Places Blame For Failure Here On Tang Shao-yi

(CHINA PRESS OWN SERVICE)

Peking, October 28.—President Hsu instructed the cabinet today to draft the formal appointment of General Chin Yun-peng as premier. This appointment is to be submitted to parliament next Tuesday.

It is announced that this step toward the formation of a permanent cabinet grows out of the failure of Wang Yi-tang to negotiate peace at Shanghai. It is now the present hope of the Government to effect peace by means of direct agreements between Northern and Southern Military leaders.

Reports, said to have originated with the Anfu Club, that a permanent cabinet soon was to be formed were vigorously denied by members of the Government no later than yesterday. Whether the appointment of Chin Yun-peng to the premiership by President Hsu signalises a surrender of the President to the Anfu organisation is not wholly assured, but the appointment, it is known, is in line with the wishes of the militarists and in accordance with the recent reports originating from them.

LI SHUN NAMED

General Li Shun, Tuchun of Kiangsu, has been offered plenipotentiary power to negotiate peace with the South, according to reliable news received from Nanking last night. The offer, it was said, was made by General Chin Yun-peng, the acting Premier, following the failure of Mr. Wang Yi-tang to open negotiations with the Southern peace delegation here.

Whether or not General Li Shun accepts the offer depends on the attitude of Mr. Tang Shao-yi, it is understood. If Mr. Tang consent to again assume the duties of the Southern chief delegate and agrees to certain concessions on his original demands, General Li Shun will act as the Northern spokesman.

But three of the original nine delegates from the North are now in Shanghai. Mr. Wu Ting-chang and Mr. Hsu Fu-su have resigned. Mr. Liu En-ko did not come to Shanghai with Mr. Wang Yi-tang, while Messrs. Wang Ko-ming, Wang Yu-ling and Sze Yu have gone to Peking and are not expected to return.

On the Southern delegation, Mr. Tang and General Hu Han-ming have resigned, Mr. Chiang Shih-chao is on his way to France, while Messrs. Peng Yin-yi, Kuo Chung-shen and Yao Ming-lan left for Canton on the Nanking. This leaves only five associate members on the Southern delegation.

URGES RENEWED WAR

Immediate resumption of hostilities was advocated by General Li Lieh-chun, who is reported by a Reuter's despatch to be planning to attack Ningpo, and General Li Kung-yuan at the meeting of the military administration in Canton Saturday. The conference was attended by representatives of all the military leaders in the South.

The decision of the conference was to get final reports on the attitude of the various provinces and at the same time prepare for the resumption of hostilities.

On the other hand, a military conference of the Northern tuchuns and military commissioners has been called by General Chang Tso-ling, Tuchun of Fengtien. The conference will decide what steps the North should take, now that the Shanghai conference is off.

According to a report of Mr. Yang Tcheng, Commissioner of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Tang Shao-yi is leaving Shanghai for Canton to assume the office of administrative councillor there. He is winding up his work in connection with the American Mission Back From Turkey Is Split On Question Of U.S. Mandate

Civilian Members Said To Favor It; Military Men Contend Project Calls For Use Of Quarter Million Troops And Oppose It

(Reuter's American Wireless)

Peking, October 26.—American Wireless from Lyons:

The Harboard Mission which arrived this afternoon is divided over the question of an American mandate for Turkey. The civilian members are unanimously in favor of America accepting the mandate for Turkey as a whole, while the military members oppose it.

All agree that the Turks, Amenians and all other elements of the Ottoman Empire desire America to accept the mandate. The military members state that the job is too big. It would require too many troops, probably a quarter of a million.

Mr. Clements, a civil member of the mission, who was charged with investigating the economic side of the question believes that an American mandate would prove a very great boon for American foreign trade and would also provide a splendid opportunity to spread democracy.

REPORT IS COMPLETED

The Mission completed its trip without misadventure except for an encounter with lawless elements in Armenia. The Mission completed its report yesterday afternoon ten minutes before the ship docked at Marseilles. It comprises many closely typewritten pages. The members of the Mission declined to discuss the report until it is presented to Mr. Polk, which will be accomplished either tonight or tomorrow morning. It is possible that the report will not be given until it has been sent to President Wilson in Washington.

The Mission, which officially finishes its work when the report is handed to Mr. Polk, intends to sail for America from Brest next week. The Mission expects to be summoned before the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee to explain its findings regarding its trip through Turkey and Armenia.

Though the members of General Harboard's Mission to Armenia who are returning to Paris today, are under orders not to discuss the nature of their report, it is believed that they have recommended against the assumption of an Armenian Mandate on the part of the United States.

QUESTION OF TROOPS

Though details of the report cannot be made public until it has been formally presented to the Supreme Council it can be taken as almost positive that the number of troops required to police the territory under mandate forms the basis of the negation. Though it is probable that in time a native constabulary could be trained and officered by Americans, it is felt that at the outset the occupation of Armenia would require more troops than public opinion in America would be willing to send abroad under present conditions.

Henry Morganthau's recommendation was not based on military necessities but rather upon altruistic sentiment. General Harboard, however, was sent to report, not on whether an American Mandate was desired by the Armenians nor on whether an American Mandate would be best for the preservation of international peace. He was sent to report on whether, granted that the other two possibilities were true, the military requirements were such that the United States could meet. It may be added that Morganthau's proposal that Great Britain should concede half of Gibraltar to America in connection with an American occupation in the Near East caused nothing but raucous laughter in Peace Conference circles.

EXCHANGE ON AMERICA AT RECORD FIGURE, 143

Rates Again Leap With Buying Brisk; Business On London At 6s. 9¾d.

Eclipsing previous marks, American exchange yesterday shot to 143, the figure having been quoted several times during the day for large amounts. Business was done with London at six shillings and ninepence three farthings for the tael. The official rates were 138¼ on America and 6s. 7d. on London. Buying was brisk, banks and brokers reporting a big business day. The market closed firm.

At the quoted rate small buyers of United States currency were fortunate. Ninety-seven Mexican dollars purchased $100 American dollars. Many banks gave even better rates for small amounts. The English pound could be bought for a little less than Mex. $4.09 while Taels 100 brought Francs 1,188, another record figure.

British Warship At Riga Is Fired On By Germans

Report From Denikin To Omsk Says Bolshevists Will Evacuate European Russia

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, October 26.—Wireless from Russian Island: Copenhagen, October 24.—German artillery fired on a British warship at Riga yesterday.

WORD FROM DENIKIN

Omsk, Oct. 25.—A wireless message received here from General Denikin reports that, according to a statement made by an officer who passed over to the Volunteers from the Red Army, the Bolsheviki are evacuating European Russia and are going to Tashkent.

The Supreme Military Council of the Reds, this officer added, has decided to evacuate Moscow and several of the People's Commissaries have already left Moscow. The message further reports that all the Ukrainian Commissaries, together with their head, Manuilsky, have been taken prisoners.

A conspiracy has been discovered in Blagovechensk to bring about a Bolshevist uprising. Fourteen ringleaders have been arrested.

A Volunteer detachment of Turco-Tartars has been formed in Tomsk.

REPORTS REVOLT

Omsk, Oct. 26.—A wireless message from General Denikin reports that a revolt has broken out in the rear of the Bolsheviki in the region of Kaluga and Serpukhof. Local troops and workmen have joined the movement.

The insurgents, who number some tens of thousands are said to have strong artillery and hundreds of machine-guns at their disposal.

A Bolshevist wireless message states that a twelve-hour day has been introduced in all factories and works which are supplying the Red Army.

VIEW IN PARIS

Peking, October 26.—American Wireless from Lyons.—That General Judenitch, commander of the Russian Northwest Army, stands very little chance of taking Petrograd without strong outside aid is the opinion of high members of the Russian Embassy staff here. This relic of the Kerensky regime is the only Russian group recognised by the Conference.

Ever since the reports of General Judenitch's success have been coming in they have been most conservative in their acceptance of them. In fact more so than any political group in Paris. The military situation of the Northwest Army, with its short front and tremendously long flank exposed to attack by the Soviet armies, is acknowledged by the most optimistic Russians to be precarious.

Recent despatches indicate that General Judenitch has suffered reverses and despatches quoted in the Socialist newspaper Humanity indicate that the population of Petrograd, including all classes, has rallied to the defense of the city, being determined to defend even the Soviet system rather than surrender to General Judenitch, whom they believe favors a monarchical restoration.

FRANCE ANGERED BY RESERVATIONS PROPOSED IN U.S.

American Senate Committee Action Excites The Paris Press

UNITE IN ATTACK

Assert Washington Wants All Powers To Accept Treaty Changes

VOICE OPPOSITION

Contend Modifications Would Tend To Destroy Versailles Pact

(American Press Wireless)

Peking, October 26.—American Wireless from Lyons.—As if by common accord the Paris press this afternoon utters great complaints against the five reservations adopted by the American Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Nearly every journal published the text of those reservations.

While the papers take a stand against the reservations themselves, it is the declaration of the Republican leaders that the Treaty should not come into effect until the Allies have agreed to them that is the target for editorial attacks.

"The Committee can make all the reservations it feels like making," says L'Intransigeant, "but the curious thing is that it demands that the Treaty shall not come into effect until we accept its reservations."

SARCASM NOT VEILED

The Liberty says, "So now the European Allies must say that they are all wrong and it is the Senate at Washington that is right and that the Allies vital interests ought to be subordinated to those of the United States. This is inadmissible."

M. L. Marcellies, writing with regard to the five reservations adopted by the American Senate Foreign Relations Committee says that with the exception of the one providing that no mandate shall be accepted except with the consent of Congress, they tend to destroy in a large measure the import of the Treaty of Versailles.

He says, "In order no doubt to attain the object which the adversaries of the Treaty are pursuing, the Committee expressed the desire that the Senatorial reservations should receive the assent of the other Powers. Thus the European Allies would have to make public declarations that they have made a mistake and that it is the Senate at Washington that is right, also that their whole interests should be subordinated to those of the United States. This is inadmissible. The reservation which denies the right of arbitration where the Monroe Doctrine is affected strikes at the precise moment when Emir Feisul proposes to the American Government to arbitrate the differences between Hedjaz and France on the subject of Syria. This question is similar to others arising from the Accord of 1916 affecting the interests of France.

More Amendments Offered In American Senate

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Oct. 22.—In the Senate, Senator McCumber, member of the "mild reservation group of Republicans," introduced a number of "compromise" reservations to the Peace Treaty, dealing with the withdrawal from the League, the application of Article ten, the Monroe Doctrine, Shantung, and inequality of voting strength in the League Assembly. Senator Jones proposed that the Senate should attach a paragraph to the ratification of the Treaty providing for the United States to withdraw from the League in two years time, unless certain conditions were fulfilled, including the restoration of Shantung to China.

Treaty With Bulgaria Before Supreme Council

(American Press Wireless)

Peking, October 26.—American Wireless from Lyons:

Paris, October 24.—With the submission of Bulgarian observations to the Bulgarian Peace Treaty commencing today, it is not expected that the Supreme Council will require more than a week or ten days to give its final answer. Hence the Bulgarian Treaty will probably be signed and out of the way within three weeks at the most.

The Conference, it is expected, will soon afterwards adjourn and turn over unfinished business to the Co-ordination Committee. It is almost a foregone conclusion that the Conference will adjourn before the Hungarian situation is cleared up sufficiently for the Conference to deal directly. Hence the Ambassadors Committee will probably fall heir to that as well as to Turkish problems. As Turkey is at present complicating these problems it may eventually be found necessary for the Powers to appoint an entirely separate conference to deal with them specially.

The Supreme Council is busily engaged today studying various reports submitted yesterday outlining essential steps for the enforcement of the permanent treaty. When Marshal Foch turns in his report tomorrow on conditions of the Armistice yet to be fulfilled, it will be possible, according to the American delegation, for the date to be definitely fixed for the coming into effect of the Treaty. Should the Treaty come into force before the Senate acts, there will be at least twenty Commissions in action to the League of Nations functioning without American representatives.

It is believed here that formal ratification of the Treaty of Versailles will occur on October 30.

NEW JAZZ ORCHESTRA MAKES BOW AT PARISIEN

Ray Breck, Saxaphonist, Is Star Of New Band; Crowd At Opening

With Ray Breck and Russell Ellis as additions to the orchestra and Captain F. Davies as the new manager, the Cafe Parisien introduced its jazz band to a crowd that thronged the ball room last night after practically every table was filled at the special dinner served.

The jazz band is a real hit. The new men, Messrs. Breck and Ellis, recently arrived from San Francisco. Breck makes his saxaphone deliver several orations in the course of an evening and in addition to being an artist with the instrument, is a comedian of the first water. Ellis is an accomplished banjoist. Art Cody, Peter Lyons and Mateo Mesa are the other members of the orchestra which is under the leadership of Mr. Harry Kerrey.

Captain Davies, who has assumed the management of the cafe, promises several novelties in the entertainment line.

Japan Removes Technicality Altering Drug Law In China

Consular Courts Enabled To Deal With Heroin Cases---Anti-Opium Association Active

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 25.—In a case that came before the Japanese Consular Court at Shanghai last month the evidence showed that seven Japanese had smuggled opium, morphia, and heroin, valued in all at $250,000, into the International Settlement. The arrests had been made by the Shanghai Municipal Police. There was no question as to the guilt of the accused. Three of them were sentenced to twenty days imprisonment, three to four months and fifteen days penal servitude and one to five days imprisonment.

As the Japanese Government has never extended its new opium laws to China, the accused were tried under a Consular order that declared it illegal for Japanese to import morphia, opium or cocaine into China. This order however made no mention of heroin.

The Consular Court ordered the confiscation of the opium and the morphia, but in the absence of specific mention in the Consular order, ruled that it had no authority to deal with the heroin, which was ordered to be returned to the defendant. These facts were published in a somewhat disconnected way during the various hearings of the case.

As the heroin in question amounted to 3,500 ounces or sufficient for upwards of twelve million injections of a drug which is more harmful than either morphia or cocaine, the matter was taken up by the International Anti-Opium Association.

Communications with the Japanese Legation led to the information that the Japanese Consul-General could not have done otherwise in the circumstances. It was explained that Japanese laws may be classified into two main categories, according to whether their primary object is judicial or administrative, with this difference that while the former apply equally in Japan or China the latter operate only within the Japanese Empire.

QUESTION OF LAW

Thus, while articles 136-141 of the Japanese Criminal Code declaring the import, manufacture, sale, use and possession of opium and its "appurtenances" without due sanction of the authorities, a criminal offense are applied in the Consular Courts as well, the opium law, the primary object of which is to regulate the use of the drug within the Empire, is not applied in China. In 1913 the Japanese Government instructed the Consuls in China to issue the Consular Order referred to above.

In 1919 during the general tariff revision in Shanghai the Chinese Government specially included heroin in the list of prohibited articles enumerated in the proposed additional rule 4 appended to the revised tariff. The representatives of the Powers all agreed for China to take measures for general recognition of these prohibitions, but formal approval of all the Treaty Powers has not yet been received.

The Anti-Opium Association thought that a dangerous precedent might be established by this case and urged that it was not right for the heroin to be given back to the defendants and in this point were informed by the Japanese Legation that the Japanese Consul-General at Shanghai had asked the Foreign Office for instructions as to the disposal of the heroin. By instructions from the Foreign Office it was arranged that the Consular Court, acting within its power, should declare that the drug be returned to the defendants, but at the same time the Prosecutor should immediately take possession of the drug, as an administrative measure for the time being, pending a separate charge to be filed by a Home Court to relieve the Consular Court of the technical difficulties involved in its prosecution.

NEW ORDER ISSUED

A further communication from the Japanese Legation now states that the Japanese Government has instructed all Consuls in China to promulgate a new Consular Order in which heroin is included in the list of contrabands, the manufacture, import, sale, purchase, use and possession of which, against the stipulations of treaties and agreements between the Governments of Japan and China are punishable at the Consular Courts. It is also proposed to include opium in the same list with a view to relieving the Consular Courts of the technical difficulties arising from the interpretation of the provision of the Criminal Code as well as the non-application of the opium law.

This is merely one of a large number of cases dealt with by the International Anti-Opium Association during the first year of its existence. Correspondence has been established and is being maintained with similar bodies in London and other places abroad, while branches and subbrancnes have been established at nearly two hundred centers in China. Efficient and powerful organisations are at work at Tientsin, Shanghai, Hankow and Harbin. Shanghai and Tientsin control a large number of subagencies and co-operation between these centers is gradually being established.

The Association is represented at Shanghai by Messrs. White-Cooper and Master who have elicited valuable information in various cases regarding the point of origin and the channels through which drugs pass on their way to China. Sub-Committees have been appointed at Peking to deal with special subjects, such as the Opium Farm at Hongkong and cultivation in China. In connection with Hongkong it is understood that the Imperial Government has already taken up the matter of opium revenue, and has instructed the Colony to adopt other means of raising revenue.

Mr. Reinsch and Mr. Julean Arnold, on their departure for America, were loaded up with commissions to execute in the United States concerning the drug traffic with the Far East.

BURNING OF DRUG

Direct communication has also been established with London through the visit of members of the London Anti-Opium Society who were able to attend the farewell dinner given to Mr. Reinsch by the Association and who expressed astonishment at the scope of the work carried out by the Association in China.

One of the first big questions with which the International Association identified itself was the burning of the opium stocks at Shanghai. At the outset the Association took up the line followed with such determination by President Hsu, that the moral effect of this burning would be enormous. The foreign press of China was divided on this question, several of the newspapers pointing out the material loss. That loss, however, was felt by China alone, for there was an overwhelming abundance of the drug throughout the world for medical requirements and the destruction meant no loss of medical comfort to sick or wounded. Letters and reports from various great capitals prove that the burning brought home to foreign peoples as nothing else could have done the desire of the Chinese President to rid his people of the greatest curse that has ever afflicted China. Furthermore the demonstration was most opportune for hitherto the Association had found considerable difficulty in securing the active assistance of Chinese officials, owing to the fact that Peking officially, under the previous administration, had been so closely identified with opium traffic.

CHINESE NOT ACTIVE

Even yet, however, it is astonishing how few Chinese in important positions give real assistance to the International Association in its work. Foreigners, particularly Britons and Americans, have entered wholeheartedly into the campaign, and in each center a number of progressive Chinese are seen doing their utmost in the same cause, but the masses of Chinese have not yet responded in the manner necessary to prove to the Tuchuns, who are maintaining their forces largely through revenue derived from opium traffic, that the people will not stand for a traffic that is no less shameful than a violation of covenants entered into by the Chinese Government with Foreign Powers, whose sole aim is to benefit the people of this great industrious country.

New drug laws introduced personally by the President have received the sanction of Parliament. Yet the cultivation of poppy is increasing year by year. Enormous quantities of opium pass over the railways under the care of military guards. Opium taxes are collected by the Tuchun of Shensi, in open defiance of the Government and the will of the people. This question is now paramount, for we are within sight of cultivation for next year's harvest.

Vaudeville Tonight

The All-Star Vaudeville Company, presented by Mr. Charles Margelis, makes its first appearance at the Olympic Theater tonight.

The artists include William and Henry Berne, strong men; Mr. B. Paniso, the noted accordian player; "Tokio" and "Mosher," the ponies that do everything but talk, and Aimee Maynard.

In the same program is included a six-act morality play "The Curse of Eve."

League To Appoint Board To Rule Saar Coal Fields

Fvie Men To Be Named To Direct Affairs In Valley District Awarded To France

(American Press Wireless)

Paris, October 20.—The first day's work of the League of Nations will have no connection with the prevention of future wars or the preservation of peace. On the contrary it will be the present and practical job of appointing a committee to run the French coal field.

When the Council assembles upon President Wilson's call on the day the Treaty becames operative, it will choose five men to rule the Saar Valley, the great coal fields awarded to France, in return for the destruction of French coal fields. One of the appointees must be a Frenchman, another must be a native of the Valley, not French, and the remaining three must be neither French nor German.

Positions on this commission may be in the nature of political plums, for the Council which appoints the commission also fixes the salaries. Salaries in turn are to be charged to the local revenues of the Valley and the committee holding the positions is empowered by treaty to levy revenues in the form of taxes and dues.

The first days work for the League brings out pointedly the most significant change which took place during the progress of the Peace Conference. The League proposals were launched with great eclat as plans for altruistic and utopian schemes for the prevention of future wars and the peservation of permanent peace. As the Conference progressed, however, it became a very practical pack animal. Scores of knotty problems that could not be settled immediately were disposed of by being turned over to the League for the final decision and administration. The League at the time was the only governmental power without a voice in the making of the Treaty and therefore the only one unable to protest at the number and weight of responsibilities alloted to it.

MANY DIVERSE TASKS

It is in this capacity of a pack animal that all sorts of odd jobs that the French had come to value as important to their interests were turned over to the delibertions of the League. Whether the League ever does any good as a war preventative it is a convenient and impressive machine for carrying out the present international agreement which the Allies might be unable to do alone.

It is pointed out here that the Council which will function in the Saar Valley is really a "dummy" council of France having back of it a legally constituted organism of the League. It will make these appointments and a few others and probably retire in favor of the permanent council later to be formed. The appointment is one of the few cases in which unanimous voting is unnecessary. The Council may elect the commission for the Saare Basin concession by a majority of votes.

Owing to the failure of the United States to act, the original program for the League of Nations is understood to be materially changed, the League becoming active and functioning the day the Anglo-French Italian ratifications are deposited, the date of which will be definitely determined Thursday.

The original program contemplated the ratification of the Treaty by the United States as soon as by the other nations.

Assistant Secretary of State Polk, however, has been given assurances that the League will only act on such matters as are necessary for the carrying out of the Treaty until the American Senate has acted but the fact remains, however, that America must qualify by an official ratification of the Treaty before she can officially have any voice in whatever decisions or discussions are taken up by the League.

SPAIN AND BRAZIL

It is regarded as very probable that Spain and possibly Brazil will also be represented on the Council of the League of Nations as soon as organised as both have already approved the League and are named with Belgium and Greece in the Treaty to sit with the representatives of the four Great Powers thus constituting the membership of nine of the League Council.

Inasmuch as it has been announced that the completed details for the effectiveness of the Treaty are not quite ready, it is doubtful if the ratifications will be formally deposited for another week or ten days, but the American delegates insist the delay is in many ways due to the attitude of the members of the United States Senate.

The American delegates declare that their action might jeopardise the peace of the world and delay the enforcement of the Treaty much longer, Hence the powers realise that no matter how deplorable the American delay in ratifying the Treaty they cannot wait until the United States Senate makes up its mind what it is going to do.

The form calling for the first meeting of the League which has been forwarded to President Wilson for his signature, will be sent to all nations signatories to the Treaty, including the United States.

The Opera

Lovers of Verdi enjoyed an evening in their own element with "La Traviata." The beautiful and pathetic melodies throughout were impartially applauded. The choruses, the drinking song, and that of the bull-fighters were reenforced by the principals of the company enjoying a rest!

Features of marked excellence were the playing of Verdi's lovely string parts in the preludes, and Miss Ossipova's "Violetta." In everything less than her full voice the quality and purity revealed the peer of the most notable opera sopranos, in Verdi's elaborate ornamentation.

A prima donna in the part of an invalid with a consumptive cough is in itself perplexing enough; and, as a matter of history, the first production in Venice was wrecked by the audience seizing on the humor of this seeming anomaly. The truthfulness of Miss Ossipova's "Farewell" and the whole of the last act made real pathos of it.

The rest of the cast is given, allowing for some mis-printing of names in the program: "Flora Belix" (Miss Ivanova) "Annina" (Miss Losieva), "Alfredo Germont" (Mr. Cheruenko), "Georgio Germont" (Mr. Gorlenko) "Gastone, Viscount of Letorieres" (Mr. Svetloff) and other parts by Messrs. Tulchinoff, Ardatoff, Anfimoff, and Voinoff—all of whom have been heard on and off.

"Pique Dame" on Friday, and "Eugene Onegin" on Sunday are the only two of Tcharkovsky's operas constantly produced in Russia. Performances, except in concert versions, have been comparatively rare outside of Russia until very recently.

"The Pearl Fishers" is by Bizet, the composer of "Carmen." Its first performance at Covent Garden in 1887 was under the title "Leila" as "Pescatori di Perle" it has been recently revived for Tetrazzini: Caruso and de Luca both sang in this opera in Genoa at the beginning of their operatic careers. The opera tonight is "Tosca," repeated.

In The Mixed Court

Two Chinese foremen employed by the Public Works Department of the Shanghai Municipal Council were found guilty in the Mixed Court yesterday of drawing wages for 200 coolies when but 155 were actually employed. The amount of the larceny is not known.

An inspector making the rounds observed what seemed to him a shortage of men at work. He asked one of the two how many were employed and was told that this foreman had 110 and the second accused 90. He proceeded thereupon to have the whole force assembled and to count, with the result that foreman number one could show but 80 and number two but 75.

For one day this difference amounted to 1,440 coppers. How long it had been going on is not known.

Each workman was supposed to receive a bamboo check which was taken up each night by the Chinese foremen and turned in to the department in exchange for the wages the man had drawn that day. The sentences were one month for the first and two weeks for the second.

The door of 513 Yunnan Road was wide open and it was 4:30 a.m. by the clock, so the Chinese policemen walked in to find out why.

The sleeping occupant was shaken into consciousness.

"Why did you leave your door open?"

"I did not. I locked it." At that moment he espied a bundle and dove for it. "My clothes. Say officer, somebody's been in here!"

They searched the house together and in the farthest room something rustled behind a great laundry basket. They moved the basket. Peu Tuh-kyi, recently released from his fifth sentence was there. He made no resistence. It took the Mixed Court only a few minutes to decide his case and the sixth sentence was 18 months.

London, October 21.—The Times understands that the Prince of Wales' visit to the United States has been cancelled owing to president Wilson's illness.

Windsor, Ontario, October 23.—The Prince of Wales was very busy yesterday visiting the characteristically English cities of Woodstock, Chatham, and London, centers of important manufacturing and farming communities which turned out en masse to give His Royal Highness an ovation.

Replying to an address at London, the Prince of Wales dwelt on the great industrial future of Canada. The city was decorated and illuminated with the most lavish illuminations obtained by waterpower from Niagara, a hundred miles distant.

The Prince of Wales had a wonderful reception at Windsor today. Thousands had crossed the border from Detroit to supplement the large population. The cheering crowd blocked the streets, even climbing the engine of the Royal train to catch a glimpse of the Prince.

END BAN ON MARKS IN SALES BY ARMY

Germans Can Now Purchase Surplus American Property At Coblenz

COULD NOT BUY DOLLARS

Airplanes Burned Because Sale Of War Material To Foe Was Forbidden

BY EDWIN I. JAMES
(New York Times)

Coblenz, Sept. 5.—Now that some one in Washington has discovered that dollars cannot be collected from Germans who do not possess them, the Liquidation Commission has a fair chance of disposing of $50,000,000 worth of property left on the Rhine by the American Army of Occupation.

The policy that has been abandoned by the Treasury Department resulted in two months' delay and a monetary loss of about $1,000,000. However, the delay results in our getting more marks for the goods to be sold to the Germans, and as for the million loss, it falls upon the Germans.

For instance, the cost of feeding 11,000 horses which could not be sold to Germans because the Americans demanded dollars where there were no dollars, has been charged to the German Government. This figures about $6,000 daily.

The Germans may not buy all this property, of course, although they will buy much of it. The decision to change the policy and accept marks means that purchasing by others than Germans will be hurried.

TRIED TO BUY DOLLARS

When J. R. Adams of the liquidation commission took up the task of disposing of this property some two and a half months ago he had orders to accept only dollars for it. German bidders could not figure how to get dollars. The sudden fall in the mark in New York was partially due to their efforts to buy dollars. Every time they tried to get hold of a few of them the price shot up.

There were extended negotiations by which it was hoped that German banks co-operating with the Government would guarantee later payment in dollars, but the plan could not be worked out.

The rate of marks for dollars had reached the point where the Germans could not afford to buy because their purchases could never be sold for a profit, since for the German population the value of the mark has not fallen as it has done abroad. While the mark in New York is worth one-fifth of its pre war value, in Germany it is worth about one-third of the pre-war value.

An arrangement has been practically decided upon by which the Germans may get goods by paying in marks at something like the present rate. Probably sixteen to one will be allowed. This gives the Germans a chance to figure and has quickly brought bids for all the horses which are likely to be accepted.

Americans studying the situation believe that the Government will not lose by taking marks at 16 to 1 and holding them until the mark advances. In army headquarters now there are 160,000,000 marks acquired in sales of food and salvaged supplies at rates all the way from 12 to 20 to the dollar.

Had marks been accepted from the first the sales would probably have been completed. Both France and Belgium are bidding for the property now here but German bidders appear to have a fair chance of getting much of it. Among the goods to be sold are 14,000 motor vehicles valued at $30,000,000 which may bring about 50 percent of that valuation.

In some quarters there has been the criticism that too much American property has been destroyed on the Rhine. Members of the Congressional Investigating Committee have laid emphasis on the destruction of airplanes and motors. Investigation of this criticism shows these facts: Old airplanes and some not old were burned and seventy-four Liberty motors were reduced to junk on a ruling by the American Army of Occupation Headquarters that war material should not be turned over to the enemy.

The Germans say they would have paid good prices for the canvas of the wings of the airplanes and also good prices for the motors, which they could have used for other than airplane purposes. However, the Americans in charge destroyed the old bodies of airplanes and with acetylene torches burned holes through the cylinders of the seventy-four Liberty motors. They could then be sold only for junk. It was held that it was not worth while to take them home, and it was wrong to turn over war material to the foe.

The ordnance section also destroyed some war property. In this connection German dealers one day saw ordnance soldiers burning old leather pouches for cartridge clips. They said to American officers that they would buy this old leather. When it was replied that it was war material and could not be sold to them, they answered that they would do with it after purchase just what the Americans were doing; that they wanted old leather to be used in the refinement of steel. Thereafter old ordnance leather was sold to the Germans at a good price.

I mentioned today to a Colonel that in Paris there was criticism of the conduct of the salvage business here, and he replied by showing me an official report that members of the investigating committee, with a Sergeant-at-Arms and a Recorder, reached Coblenz at 8 o'clock one evening and left at 9 o'clock the next morning. He did not think they could learn enough in that time to form a basis of much worth-while criticism.

What's New On The Rialto Of Fashion?

BY HELEN WILLIAMS

DURING these bright beautiful days of autumn, Dame Fashion has decreed that the serge, satin and taffeta dress is quite the thing for afternoon and street wear. The well-tailored serge, with a fur neck-piece and a small rakish hat, is always looked upon with favor by this capricious lady, particularly when worn for shopping and the afternoon call. An always popular frock for the tea dansant or bridge party is of the softest black crepe-meteor, with a draped skirt and a touch of brilliant color at the belt. The very simplicity of the gown makes for its extreme smartness. A large soft hat, of a decidedly contrasting shade, is most effective when worn with this dress. Taffeta dresses are shown in brighter colors than the satins or crepe-meteors, as most of them are in burgundy, brown and blue, with trimmings that harmonise beautifully with the materials. They make extremely pretty dresses for afternoon functions of any type.

One of the prettiest evening dresses shown here this season is at Boyes, Bassett and Co. It is of a delicate salmon shade, with a heavy silk bodice and overdraped in salmon and silver. The skirt is of the ever fascinating harem type. There is also a simple yellow taffeta evening dress, draped over silver lace, which would be most becoming to a young girl. For the more formal tea dansant, or as an informal dinner dress, there is a lovely brown and yellow georgette. These colors blend beautifully, and the lines of the draped tunic help to make this gown very attractive. As a decided contrast to all these dainty colorings and fragile materials, they are also showing a splendid line of heavy fall coats. These coats are not only good-looking and warm, but they are also very reasonable. They are in mottled cloths, checks and in solid colors. Many of them are trimmed with fur collars, particularly with seal-skin.

There is nothing quite so fascinating as a pretty woman toying with a great, gorgeous ostrich fan in some color that is a strong contrast to her gown. Hall and Holtz have just received a shipment in which there was many beautiful articles of adornment for "milady," and among them are these ostrich fans in many new shades. Ostrich feathers are very popular just at present, and are even being used as trimmings on some of the newest frocks being shown, but they are particularly in favor on hats and as fans.

The millinery department is showing some of their hats trimmed in feathers, and many extremely clever creations can be seen in this department. There is a little old-rose and silver, mauchon hat that is just the thing for the pretty debutante. Many new misses' hats of all styles and in the newest shades have just arrived. The new veils are in shades that will match almost any hat, and the designs that have been worked into the mesh are most original. Chiffon velvet in all colors is being shown here. The Jaeger's Golf jackets for ladies, in gray, dull green and mixed colors are just the thing for the cool weather.

Wonderful wool motoring scarfs, in plaids, solid colors and stripes can be seen at Whiteaway and Laidlaws', and these scarfs are also always an attractive addition to a sports costume. There are some silk scarfs, with the Zingari strip in most brilliant colors. Another important item for the completion of the sports costume is the heather mixture sports stockings. Oynx hosiery in dark brown, gray, suede, cordovan and black and white are also being shown. With the approach of colder weather, woolen blankets and down quilts will occupy an important place on the shopping list. A splendid line of white wool blankets is being shown here, in conjunction with McClintock's down quilts. These quilts are very pretty, as they are covered in fancy sateens and satin.

Squires-Bingham are showing many new and pretty novelties, that are also extremely useful. There are some handpainted ivory coat-hangers, with butterflies and gaily colored birds on them, that are lovely. The hand-painted cards of all kinds are both pretty and useful, for there are tally cards, place cards, and birthday cards. Some of the children's dresses shown here are exquisite. There is one in particular, a baby dress of pearline covered with the finest embroidery, that is one of the daintiest things I have ever seen. For more practical wear, and for the older child there is the Jack Tar dress, trimmed in red and white. All in all, the children's wearing appeal shown here combines both beauty and practicality.

Spats in brown, fawn, grey, black, navy and white are being shown at Silberman's. They are made of strong, lasting materials, and are of a good height. Spats are always very smart when worn with pumps. A new shipment of Phipps hats and very fine Kenyon coats has just been received. The hats are velvets and felts, and the coats are made up in the new cloths. There is one big black hat, faced with henna, and with just one henna feather around the brim that is very smart. Heavy gold and silver cord that makes a wonderful hat or dress trimming is also shown here.

In these progressive days there are even fashions in the musical world, as is evidenced by the new records received by the Robinson Piano Company, for most of these records are the Jazz records, which are most popular and fashionable at the present time. The "Jazz" is now at the height of its popularity, if you have a Grafanola you can buy these lively and inspiring records and have some fine dancing right in your own home.

The silks seen at Laou Kiu Chwang's are indescribably beautiful. There are so many varieties of texture and color that it is quite a problem as to what one likes the best. The changeable taffeta silks, in all colors, would make lovely dresses. For the evening gown, there are some very heavy satins, with silver and gold designs worked in, and the new satin crepe could also be used to make lovely evening gowns. The fur department is showing some wonderful Russian sables, in small two skin scarfs and in entire coats. There are also some beautiful ermine and squirrel coats, and fox fur neck-pieces are just the thing when worn with dresses or suits.

Football Season Gets Away To Flying Start In America

Great Year Anticipated For College Game; Many Changes Made In Coaching Staffs

New York, September 6.—The football season reaches the active stage in a great number of Eastern colleges this week. At Harvard West Point, and Annapolis, as well as a few less notable institutions, the gridiron work has been under way for several days, but most of the coaches have decided upon either Sept. 8 or Sept. 15 as the starting day for their players. By the end of the coming week, the opening gun will have been fired in the gridiron campaigns of a majority of Eastern colleges.

For the most part, the football mentors of 1919 are holdovers, but some very important changes have been made in the coaching staffs of leading Eastern universities since the world war cast its shadow upon the gridiron game. Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, and the Army are all to have coaches other than those who directed the teams that last represented these institutions. In other instances are found shifts of noted gridiron teachers of prewar days, such as the signing of Frank Cavanaugh by Boston College and the acquisition of Sol Metzger at Union.

Yale football for the coming season will be under the supervision of Dr. Al Sharpe, perhaps the greatest all-around athlete in Yale history, who returns to his alma mater after several years as coach at Cornell. Sharpe, who was graduated from Yale in the class of 1902, enjoyed the distinction of making six athletic teams while a student at the New Haven university. He attained particular prominence in baseball, football, and basket ball, but found time to show skill as a member of rowing, gymnastic, and wrestling teams at Yale. He returns to Yale to take the place which was held by Tad Jones when Yale was last prominent in the field of intercollegiate football.

Dr. Sharpe has surrounded himself with a galaxy of assistants that should spell success for his regime with the Eli football squad. Dr. W. T. Bull, who has assisted in Yale coaching for several years, will be back to look after the backfield candidates and to give instruction in punting, a feature of the game in which he was especially proficient. Dr. Arthur Brides will be back to look after the line from tackle to tackle, as he has done for several seasons past. Johnny Cates, a Yale end of fifteen years ago, will look after the ends. He will have the assistance for a part of the season of Moseley, a star end of a few seasons ago. Yale's Alumni Advisory Committee will consist of Vance McCormick, Walter Camp, Brink Thorne, and John Kilpatrick. Surrounded by all this talent, Sharpe can feel that Yale football is in safe hands.

CHANGES AT HARVARD

Unusual interest will center around the football happenings at Harvard this season as Percy Haughton, a name that long has been linked with Crimson success on the gridiron, will not direct affairs there. Bob Fisher, a captain of one of the great elevens which Haughton coached, will be in charge of football at Cambridge, and he is hoping that Haughton will find time to give some assistance in the gridiron work. Fisher's squad of assistant coaches is not complete at this time, but he will have plenty of expert talent on his board of strategy. Derrick Parmenter, a center of the first rank, is to coach the aspirants to this position; Sam Felton will look after the punting; Dick Wigglesworth and Mal Logan will direct the quarter backs, Wallie Trumbull will assist in coaching the linemen, while Leo Leary and Charley Coolidge will look after the ends. Fisher hopes to have Lient. Eddie Mahan, now in Rumania with the marines, for part of the season.

Speedy Rush passes out of Princeton football after several seasons as leader in Jungletown, and his place will be taken by Bill Roper, one-time star at the New Jersey university. Roper cannot be classed as a newcomer at Princeton as he held the coaching reins a few years ago and he did considerable work with the Tiger elevens in years when he was not the head coach.

Roper directed the famous Princeton team of 1911 which scored victories over both Yale and Harvard. His list of assistants has not been announced, but there will be no shortage of old-time stars once the season gets under way. Princeton graduates always flock back to Old Nassau to help the resident coach put on the finishing touches for the big games of the year.

RUSH GOES TO CORNELL

Rush's departure from Princeton does not take him from the upper set of Eastern football. The departure of Dr. Sharpe from Cornell left a vacancy which the athletic council at Ithaca filled by the acquisition of the former Princeton mentor. Rush gave evidence during his stay at Tigertown that he was a real team builder, and he won the respect of the football world by his sound system and methods. He failed to develop a team that took the measure of Yale or Harvard during his stay at Princeton, but it must not be forgotten that a Princeton coach is greatly handicapped in this particular work by the smaller squads from which he must pick his team.

Up at West Point one of the most difficult tasks the football sphere has developed in recent years has been put in the hands of one of the game's greatest players and coaches, Colonel Charles Daly, who starred at both Harvard and West Point some twenty years ago. The call of the world war left little in the way of experienced football talent at the Government school up the Hudson. Classes were graduated prematurely in order that needed officers might be had and all the stars of the West Point teams of other years are gone. There is no Oliphant around whom to mold a great eleven. The condition is emphasised by the fact that the Navy promises to have one of the greatest teams in her history, and the Army-Navy game is to be resumed this year after a lapse since 1916.

Coach Daly will have as assistants at West Point Hayes, '09; Prichard, '15; Meacham, '17; Bathurst, '17, and other stars of other years. A large squad of cadets reported for work several days ago, and despite the apparent lack of real football material the Army-Navy game is not likely to lose any of its attractiveness. Weak Navy teams have risen to their greatest ability against the Army, and there is no doubt about the Army team of 1919 being a real fighting aggregation when it faces the midshipmen at the Polo Grounds in late November.

Bankart Back at Colgate

Colgate, as a result of the return of Larry Bankart, promises to be an important member of the Eastern football group in the coming season. Bankart was in charge a few seasons ago, and the up-State college had teams which specialised in taking the measure of the accredited top-notchers of the game. His departure to take up other business was a sad blow to Colgate, but he has found it possible to return, and football interest has reached a new mark as a result. Like Frank Cavanaugh at Boston College and Sol Matzger at Union, his will be a case of a recognised coaching genius starting again with entirely new material.

Among the prominent coaches who will again be in charge of the teams which they directed last season, or when football was last played at the particular college, are the following:

Columbia—Fred T. Dawson.
Pennsylvania—Robert T. Folwell.
Dartmouth—C. W. ("Fat") Spears.
Rutgers—George Foster Sanford.
Pittsburgh—Glenn S. Warner.
Syracuse—Frank J. O'Neill.
Brown—E. N. Robinson.
Annapolis—Gilmour Dobie.
Georgetown—Albert Exendine.
Lehigh—Thomas Keady.
Penn State—Hugo Bezdek.
Swarthmore—Roy Mercer.
Michigan—Fielding H. Yost.
Minnesota—Dr. Harry Williams.
West Virginia—M. M. McIntyre.
W. and J.—David C. Morrow.

Eastern colleges outside the top flight in football, which are making coaching changes, are Wesleyan, Holy Cross, Trinity and Lafayette. Edward S. Liston, a former Michigan player, takes up the work at Wesleyan. Holy Cross will have Cleo O'Donnell, on of the greatest players in the gridiron history of the Worcester college. The Trinity team will be coached by George Buck, formerly of Kent School. John Sutherland, recent star at Pittsburgh, takes up the coaching duties at Lafayette. Joe Brooks, who formerly coached at Williams, will again have charge of football at the college in the Berkshires.

Joe Beckett, Who May Be Dempsey's Next Opponent

Joe Beckett, heavyweight champion of Great Britain, photographed at his training quarters at Southampton, when he was preparing for his contest with Eddie McGoorty, the American middleweight boxer, whom he defeated. A match between Beckett and Jack Dempsey is a near future probability.

JOCKEYS RETURN HOME TO U.S. FROM FRANCE

Out Of Two Hundred Mounts Frank O'Neill Rode More Than Fifty Winners

(American Press Wireless)

Paris, October 22.—Frank O'Neill, leading jockey of the French turf for the season now coming to an end, is returning to his home in Saint Louis early in November with his wife for two months rest up.

O'Neill, who rides for Mr. William X. Vanderbilt, rode more than fifty winners out of 200 mounts.

Matthew MacGee, who rates third among the jockeys on the French turf this year, expects to return to America with his wife and will visit his family at Cincinatti.

MacGee has ridden 40 winners out of 180 mounts and is preceded by O'Neill and Bellhouse, an English jockey.

Guy Warner, another American who rides for the Eknayan stables, rates fifth among the jockeys, being preceded by Sharp, another English boy.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE TODAY

All Americans who ever played football are urged to be at the Race Course this morning at seven o'clock when the American Athletic Club eleven will hold its first practice. Rubber shoes should be worn. Candidates are wanted this morning as signals will be cut loose and they must be learned. The game will be played Thanksgiving morning with the possibility of a practice scrimmage a week from Saturday with a sailor team.

Rugby Club Meets

The first general meeting of the Shanghai Rugby Football Club since October, 1915, was held last night at the Shanghai Rowing Club.

The following were elected officers for the season: Mr. A. W. Burkill, president; Capt. E. I. M. Barrett, vice president; Mr. J. W. Webber, captain; Mr. F. L. Wainwright, vice captain and honorary secretary. Mr. E. S. Fox was elected honorary treasurer with Messrs. Garner, Cobbett and Rodger as members of the committee.

It was decided that those who are at present on the roll should obtain as many members as possible and if sufficient were forthcoming a practice turnout should be held next Saturday afternoon on the Cricket Club's ground.

Harriers Have Run

The members of the Shanghai Harriers Club had a capital weekend training run with a number of promising runners out. The start was from the Club's Headquarters, Kiangwan Road and the run was over a 3½ miles course. Both fast and slow squads were out.

B. Lawrie Smith was the first man home for the fast while M. Seredkin came in first for the slow pack.

The Novice Championship will be run off during next month and with many good young runners this should be a very close race.

THE SUBMARINES AND BOVRIL

During the War food supplies were greatly restricted in the United Kingdom owing to the submarine blockade, and Bovril was so indispensable to the soldiers, wounded, and the people that it had to be retained in the British Isles, where it is made, or sent to the fighting fronts.

Fresh supplies of Bovril have now arrived and there is no longer any need to make shift with substitutes which lack its unique vital and energising properties.

Bovril is the food whose body-building powers have been proved by independent scientific experiments to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken.

DESOLATION REIGNS NORTH OF VERDUN

Silence of Death Hangs Over Stricken Sector Where Cannon Roared

BY EDWARD L. JAMES

Verdun, September 6.—A year ago the wet blackness of midnight was broken by a thousand and one spurts of flame as many cannon swelled out a mighty roar along a line from the Argonne Forest over east to the Meuse River. It was the First American Army introducing itself to the Germans. On that rainy and cold September morning a hundred thousand fighting men from across the sea—many of them strangers to battle—waited in the mud of deep-cut trenches for the word to go forward against the Hindenburg line, called by its makers impregnable, and having proved that reputation against more than one bitter assault of the troops of France and Britain. In the sickly light of the dawn of an ugly day they went ahead. In the five weeks that followed they fought out that heartrending battle, until on November 1 they broke through the last of the German defenses. And soon after the war ended.

A year ago it was. Now those men—except for those who sleep on the sloping hill southeast of Romagne—have gone back home. I was with them on that morning they started, and I came back today to the scene of the greatest battle in which troops of America ever engaged.

Over the hills northwest of Verdun silence reigns. It is not the silence of peace; it is the silence of death. I have seen the Western battlefront from the coast to Switzerland; I have seen the war-torn mud of the fields of Flanders, the stretches of nothing in the valley of the Somme, the tortured terrain where was the Chemin-des-Dames, the ruins of Ypres, the remnants of Soissons, the tragic shell of Rheims, but there is no scene so desolate, so stricken, so dead, as the hills northwest of Verdun, over which the Yankees fought to victory a year ago.

TRENCHES FILLED IN

They have filled up the trenches on many of the fronts of France, and nature and the plowman have blotted out many of the scars. The people have come back to many of the wrecked villages of other parts of France and children play amid the wreck and ruin while their parents patch up shelled houses. But not so in the Meuse-Argonne. No one has been so hardy and so brave as to try to restore that barren stretch. The trenches are there yet, and the wire entanglements, and the old dugouts, and the spots of ground stained yellow by hateful mustard gas. It is there as war left it. No trees grow and no flowers bloom. Stand atop Dead Man's Hill and look as far as eye can see and there is nothing living. No human being moves in sight. The countryside has died and its resurrection is not yet.

There is no scene so dismal. Picture if you can the view. Hill after rolling hill stretch away in all directions from this highest of them all. Innumerable brown traces of trenches wriggle across them in a thousand twists. Rows of tree stumps tell where a road once wound its way. Rusty wire in symmetrical lines runs in all directions. The one time fields are potted as if by smallpox—like the face of a man who had died from the disease. Millions on millions of shells did that. Down there in a valley is a sort of white smudge. It was once the village of Malancourt. Its stones now make the road I just came up. Here and there sticks the head of a German pillbox, more than one of them torn by a big shell which left the iron skeleton sticking up in rusty ugliness. The debris of war lies about. Here an abandoned wagon; there an old over-turned water cart. There lies a broken rifle; here a dented helmet whose wearer paid the price.

Over atop another hill rise the ruins of Montfaucon, from which the Crown Prince watched his costly and vain effort to take Verdun. It cost many good American lives to drive the Germans from that stronghold. Every foot of the land is historic. Every foot is filled with tragic stories. Here a dugout has caved in and from the ground sticks the thighbone, the armbone and three crazy skeleton fingers of a disinterred soldier man. In spots weeds grow—but not many. Mostly the terrain unfolds brown and barren and dead. Everything is dead. The impression is the impression of death. It wasn't the same feeling when one saw that land filled with life, with soldiers going ahead and coming back, with convoys on all the miserable roads, with the air filled with screaming shells and airplanes. It seemed a fitting arena for the mighty struggle. But now they are all gone. Everything that lived has gone. Everything is left dead.

Over to the West one sees the wooded side of the Argonne and involuntarily one listens for the rat-tat-tat of the machine guns heard so often in the dreary weeks it took the Americans to clean out the Germans. One wonders how goes it in the elaborate and fanciful German dugouts built on the northern slopes of those wooded hills. What ghosts play in the old motion picture theater over there north of the Four de Paris. Is the yellow old sheet hanging crazily from the stage wire as it was twelve months ago? Is the stream still bubbling where the members of the "Lost Battalion" braved death to quench their thirst?" Is it still muddy over there?

Thinking about that and almost starting that way, one sees in the distance the Stars and Stripes at the top of a white pole and remembers that that is the great American cemetery at Romagne and one decides to go that way.

Up the road the Yankee engineers built from ruined villages across what for almost four years had been No Man's Land. It is bumpy and full of holes. No one has paid any attention to it since the Americans finished using it. The chalky stone makes it lie white and crooked in the sunshine. Up towards Montfaucon, past the old ammunition dump just this side of the hill, where so many traffic jams formed and where one time American wounded lay for fifty hours in trucks, while many died I look up the hill where lies the bones of the town. There on the north side is the house which shielded the entrance to the Crown Prince's dugout and where the 3d Division once placed its headquarters. I had to spend three hours once there because so many shells were falling atop the hill it would have been madness to try to get away. One remembers how the walls of that dugout rang when German heavies lit near by.

Down the north side of the hill, scarcely a trace is left of the road down which so many American supply trucks rolled in view of the enemy, and one sees pieces of them still lying there. In Nantillois there was one of Frenchman puttering about in a manner which seemed to say that he found his job scarcely worth while. Up Another hill to Cunel and one finds a few French soldiers. A kilometer westward and there stretches over twenty-acres what look like a white blanket. Closer one sees the whiteness is the whiteness of thousands and thousands of white crosses. Line after line they stretch away to the crest of the hill. In neat rows, with greensward atop the graves, lie some 25,000 American fighting men, while the furls of Old Glory wave in protecting care over them. Theirs a fitting resting place—on the German side of the Hindenburg line.

Woman's Club Meeting

Members of the American Woman's Club Literary Department meet Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the Carlton for an address on the subject of "Chinese pottery and porcelains" to be given by Mrs. Fearn. At that time arrangements will be announced relative to a visit that members will make Saturday to see an unusual collection of procelains.

Hallowe'en Party To Be Held Friday

It isn't known whether they will pull taffy or "bob" for apples or both but the American Halowe'en entertainment for Friday night in the Masonic hall promises every comer his dollar's worth, if the wise wagging of heads on the part of committeemen and their half-covered smiles mean anything.

It's a non-profiteering enterprise, according to the chairman, and every copper taken in on tickets comes back in refreshments and program. Apple pie, doughnuts 'n everything. All Americans have been invited who could be reached with "Punk-'nhed" messages and for those who could not a general call has been issued. The affair is to be informal which is interpreted to mean that full dress is not necessary.

New Plea To Paris Sent From Armenia

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, October 20.—The heads of the Orthodox, Roman Catholic and Protestant communities of Armenia have telegraphed to M. Clemenceau demanding the occupation by Allied troops of the principal points of the Ottoman Empire, for the protection of Christians, under the present reign of terror in the interior.

At The Carlton

A special dinner and a prize ball to follow will be given tomorrow night at the Carlton Cafe, the first affair of its kind in some years. Two awards will be given with each dance. The dinner guests will have the choice of tables in the ball-room.

General Li Shun Named As Delegate

peace delegation and will refuse to commit himself to any peace negotiations after he leaves Shanghai, it is stated.

WANG'S MANIFESTO

Mr. Wang Yi-tang, chief Northern peace delegate, issued a manifesto last night.

Mr. Wang's manifesto reads as follows:

"Over a month ago I was instructed to come to the South. The day for the resumption of the Shanghai conference is still remote because Mr. Tang Shao-yi, the Southern peace delegate, has resigned. Although the South has urged him to remain in office, Mr. Tang has not yet given his consent. The responsibility for the delay of the conference, therefore, is clearly defined.

"Shanghai is a cosmopolitan city where expression of public thought is varied and often inaccurate. It has been announced in the newspapers that I have resigned and left Shanghai. The astounding news that I committed suicide by taking poison appeared in the public print. Sarcastic cartoons have been published. Dangerous missles have been hurled at me. Means have been devised to intimidate me.

"The aim of these people is no other than to destroy the attempt at peace in order to carry out their own intrigues.

"I received my appointment during a period when the nation was undergoing a crisis. It has been the principle of my life to serve my country. Should my service be beneficial to the country, why should not I sacrifice myself?

"It has been well said in a proverb that a gentleman should not be concerned with the mischief of others. Moreover, when I left the chief executive, his instructions were that under no circumstances would the chief peace delegate be recalled. This showed the sincerity of the Central Government for peace.

"When I passed through the provinces of Chihli, Fengtien, Shantung and Kiangsu, the military authorities, civilians, officers and men of the army further encouraged me with their decision for peace. Officials and organisations of other provinces also urged me to hasten the day when we will see the termination of civil war.

"How can I alter my original aim and be discouraged by irresponsible rumors. The only thing I can do is to ignore them and smile. For fear that distance might alter the aspect of the reports, I issue this message.

"The European war has concluded. The world is turning its attention to the Far East. This Republic has been established for eight years but the foundation of the nation is still unstable. Why should there be this repeated conflict within? We are not enemies.

"The only alternative that I have at present is to wait patiently until such time when our opponents can come back to their senses.

"I believe my fellow-countrymen who are tired of internal dissension, will sympathise with me. For my part, I will not forget the encouragement and advice you gave me. I realise that there are obstacles in my path. But I will not betray the trust placed in me."

Leipzig Reports A Swindle Reminiscent Of The 'Captain Of Koepenick'

Berlin, September 4.—The rich variety of current crime stories affords interesting stories and often humorous glimpses of the dark background of degeneration behind slow-moving and on the whole dull and uninspiring life in the new Germany. The overcrowded condition of nearly all professions and occupations extends even to keen competition among thieves. A native of Celle, in Hanover, clandestinely and illegally slaughtered a cow—which is the profitable preliminary to placing a cow into circulation as prime beef through the underground channels of the illegal food traffic, flourishing today as never before. A band of four thieves got wind of the clandestine cow's carcass and proceeded to steal it in the night. While engaged in the business a second band of four thieves appeared and after a fight drove off the first gang, and proceeded to salvage the dead cow. While bringing the booty into safety, however, the second band was surprised by night watchmen, who captured the cow after another engagement.

"CAPTAIN OF KOEPENICK"

A whimsical swindle, reminiscent of the "Captain of Koepenick," was recently pulled off in Leipzig. In the night an alleged Sergeant Major appeared with a detachment of Noske guards at a first-class hotel and hauled one of the guests, Director of a large manufacturing corporation, out of bed, and charged him with attempting to smuggle gold out of the country.

The director was taken to the main guard station and there turned over to the Lieutenant in command, who took from him all his papers and valuables. The "Sergeant Major" said that detectives from Berlin would be coming along soon to fetch the prisoner. No detectives arriving by morning, however, investigation developed that the "Sergeant Major" swindler had meanwhile taken over the director's valuables from the local criminal police, giving a receipt in due form, and had also collected the director's two trunks from the hotel and disappeared.

He had fooled the Leipzig military and police authorities with a duly stamped written authority from a Berlin military commander. The Director wasn't wanted at all by the criminal police. The up-to-date swindler got away with about 10,000 marks.

The "fake" detective game is quite popular with the criminal profession. Fake detectives forced their way into the private banking business of one Ritter, living at Hindenburg Street 80, in the west end of Berlin. They made a search of the premises and "confiscated" 10,000 marks in cash. While they were at it they stole also all of Banker Ritter's food cards.

POLICE CROOKS ALSO

A Berlin police reporter is authority for the statement that "cases are multiplying in terrifying fashion in which genuine criminal police operate 'on their own' against illegal saccharine and food traffickers, and in their turn continue to 'shove along' the confiscated goods." Two Berlin detectives, recently convicted, had thus "raided" a drug store and confiscated 60 ounces of saccharine, 2,000 marks in cash and a check for 1,000 marks.

A Berlin innkeeper was alarmed by the continuous ringing of an alarm bell connected with the living rooms at the back of his establishment. Hurrying thither, he found his combination barmaid and servant girl trussed up, hands firmly bound behind her back. The girl said she had been attacked and overpowered by a "sailor with a blackened face," who, incidentally, stole 12,000 marks worth of jewelry and other valuables.

The innkeeper took up the pursuit. A neighbor had seen a sailor disappearing into a nearby inn. Here he was caught in the lavatory, washing his face and in the act of changing his clothes. He confessed that the servant girl had acted in collusion with him; it had been a put-up job.

Prince Sizzo von Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt at his ancestral castle of Gross-Hartha, in Saxony, missed 100,000 marks' worth of jewelry. Detective suspicion finally centered on a diva of the Dresden opera, who was an occasional week-end visitor with Prince Sizzo. When part of the loot was found in her possession the diva pleaded that she had committed the theft " in a state of nerve weakness."

A COMPLICATED PLOT

Four men with suspiciously large packages were waiting on the sidewalk in Berlin for a cab. Near them loitered three other men. A Berlin sleuth, attracted by the two groups, lingered in the offing. The four got into a cab and drove off. Then the three hailed a cab and followed them. The sleuth mounted a cab and brought up the procession. The first cab stopped at a house in the Grenadier Strasse the four with their packages went in.

The second cab pulled up in front of the same house; the three entered, and after a while came out again, re-entered their cab and drove to a house in another street. Again the sleuth followed in his cab. The mysterious three entered the second house and reappeared again, one carrying a typewriter. They then drove off. The sleuth still followed, picked up on the way another detective, and, thus reinforced, nabbed the mysterious three. They had been pulling the "fake" detective stunt with success on equally real crooks.

The original four with the big packages were illicit chocolate traffickers. The fake detectives had caught them red-handed, and, in lieu of confiscating their stock of chocolate in the packages had accepted 100 marks "hush money." The fake detectives also made the four chocolate "shovers" tell from whom they had bought their stuff, then drove to the seller's address, "confiscated" his ready cash of 3,000 marks and took along his typewriter for good measure.

The night hawk accomplice in crime has also made his appearance. Wilhelm Gramatski, a merchant of Stettin, fell in with a smooth-spoken stranger on the Friedrichstrasse, the nocturnal Bowery of Berlin, and accompanied the stranger to a cafe, where he was introduced to three friends. In the early morning hours the party drove in a cab to the Tiergarten, where the merchant from the provinces was picked clean of 10,000 marks and his jewelry, the cabby, according to the police report, watching the proceedings "neutrally."

Two taxicab chauffeurs and the night porter of a nearby hotel calmly watched a band of burglars break into a store and load their booty into a wagon, which one of the band guarded with a drawn revolver. Though it was daylight, five in the morning, neither the chauffeurs nor the night porter alarmed the police. They "feared the revenge of the bandits," they said.

"WELL-DRESSED STRANGER"

One Bruno Orlowski, a merchant, was walking in the neighborhood of Berlin's Fishmarket at 9 p.m. when he was accosted by a "well-dressed stranger," and continued walking down the street with him, until suddenly a sergeant, accompanied by two soldiers in uniform, stopped the two men and declared the merchant under arrest.

The sergeant showed his military papers, but declined to state the grounds for the arrest. The "well-dressed stranger" said it would all prove to be a mistake and offered to accompany his chance acquaintance as a witness, suggesting that since it was all a mistake they would do well to attract as little attention as possible. The soldiers took the two civilians to the railroad station, put them on a train and took them to the suburb of Hirschgarten, where the staff of their military outfit who had "ordered the arrest" was supposed to be located.

Decoyed into the woods near the railroad station, the merchant was felled by a rifle butt and robbed of 1,000 marks and his jewelry. The sergeant, the two soldiers and the "well-dressed stranger" fired a few shots at the merchant as he staggered to his feet and began calling for help, and then ran. All the police were able to ascertain was that the band had boarded a train back to the Friedrichstrasse, Berlin.

Money Cannot Buy More

It's made a real hit, and no wonder with such a beautiful Crepe de Chine. Hand-made, pure, in its original shade, it is offered to you in one piece, ten yards long and twenty six inches wide. Makes beautiful shirts. As a present for either sex what better article could you choose? There is sufficient Crepe in the piece to make the most beautiful dresses. For women's underwear it can't be beat. Think of the memories this Crepe brings to its owner. Think of the distance from whence it comes. Think of Marco Polo, of Kublai Kahn, of Kings, Queens and Millionaires. The richest people in the world cannot buy, any finer, more pliable, silk than this Crepe de Chine. The price of twenty dollars per piece is within reach of all. Send along your cheque or Chinese postal money order, and we will at once mail you one piece of Szechwan Crepe de Chine, postage free. If you really want to be keen, send her a piece of Crepe de Chine.

BERLIN HOLD-UPS MANY AND VARIED

One Not Uncommon Method Of Robbery Is Through 'Fake' Detectives

ROBBERS ROB THEMSELVES

Leipzig Reports A Swindle Reminiscent Of The 'Captain Of Koepenick'

Berlin, September 4.—The rich variety of current crime stories affords interesting stories and often humorous glimpses of the dark background of degeneration behind slow-moving and on the whole dull and uninspiring life in the new Germany. The overcrowded condition of nearly all professions and occupations extends even to keen competition among thieves. A native of Celle, in Hanover, clandestinely and illegally slaughtered a cow—which is the profitable preliminary to placing a cow into circulation as prime beef through the underground channels of the illegal food traffic, flourishing today as never before. A band of four thieves got wind of the clandestine cow's carcass and proceeded to steal it in the night. While engaged in the business a second band of four thieves appeared and after a fight drove off the first gang, and proceeded to salvage the dead cow. While bringing the booty into safety, however, the second band was surprised by night watchmen, who captured the cow after another engagement.

"CAPTAIN OF KOEPENICK"

A whimsical swindle, reminiscent of the "Captain of Koepenick," was recently pulled off in Leipzig. In the night an alleged Sergeant Major appeared with a detachment of Noske guards at a first-class hotel and hauled one of the guests, Director of a large manufacturing corporation, out of bed, and charged him with attempting to smuggle gold out of the country.

The director was taken to the main guard station and there turned over to the Lieutenant in command, who took from him all his papers and valuables. The "Sergeant Major" said that detectives from Berlin would be coming along soon to fetch the prisoner. No detectives arriving by morning, however, investigation developed that the "Sergeant Major" swindler had meanwhile taken over the director's valuables from the local criminal police, giving a receipt in due form, and had also collected the director's two trunks from the hotel and disappeared.

He had fooled the Leipzig military and police authorities with a duly stamped written authority from a Berlin military commander. The Director wasn't wanted at all by the criminal police. The up-to-date swindler got away with about 10,000 marks.

The "fake" detective game is quite popular with the criminal profession. Fake detectives forced their way into the private banking business of one Ritter, living at Hindenburg Street 80, in the west end of Berlin. They made a search of the premises and "confiscated" 10,000 marks in cash. While they were at it they stole also all of Banker Ritter's food cards.

POLICE CROOKS ALSO

A Berlin police reporter is authority for the statement that "cases are multiplying in terrifying fashion in which genuine criminal police operate 'on their own' against illegal saccharine and food traffickers, and in their turn continue to 'shove along' the confiscated goods." Two Berlin detectives, recently convicted, had thus "raided" a drug store and confiscated 60 ounces of saccharine, 2,000 marks in cash and a check for 1,000 marks.

A Berlin innkeeper was alarmed by the continuous ringing of an alarm bell connected with the living rooms at the back of his establishment. Hurrying thither, he found his combination barmaid and servant girl trussed up, hands firmly bound behind her back. The girl said she had been attacked and overpowered by a "sailor with a blackened face," who, incidentally, stole 12,000 marks worth of jewelry and other valuables.

The innkeeper took up the pursuit. A neighbor had seen a sailor disappearing into a nearby inn. Here he was caught in the lavatory, washing his face and in the act of changing his clothes. He confessed that the servant girl had acted in collusion with him; it had been a put-up job.

Prince Sizzo von Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt at his ancestral castle of Gross-Hartha, in Saxony, missed 100,000 marks' worth of jewelry. Detective suspicion finally centered on a diva of the Dresden opera, who was an occasional week-end visitor with Prince Sizzo. When part of the loot was found in her possession the diva pleaded that she had committed the theft " in a state of nerve weakness."

A COMPLICATED PLOT

Four men with suspiciously large packages were waiting on the sidewalk in Berlin for a cab. Near them loitered three other men. A Berlin sleuth, attracted by the two groups, lingered in the offing. The four got into a cab and drove off. Then the three hailed a cab and followed them. The sleuth mounted a cab and brought up the procession. The first cab stopped at a house in the Grenadier Strasse the four with their packages went in.

The second cab pulled up in front of the same house; the three entered, and after a while came out again, re-entered their cab and drove to a house in another street. Again the sleuth followed in his cab. The mysterious three entered the second house and reappeared again, one carrying a typewriter. They then drove off. The sleuth still followed, picked up on the way another detective, and, thus reinforced, nabbed the mysterious three. They had been pulling the "fake" detective stunt with success on equally real crooks.

The original four with the big packages were illicit chocolate traffickers. The fake detectives had caught them red-handed, and, in lieu of confiscating their stock of chocolate in the packages had accepted 100 marks "hush money." The fake detectives also made the four chocolate "shovers" tell from whom they had bought their stuff, then drove to the seller's address, "confiscated" his ready cash of 3,000 marks and took along his typewriter for good measure.

The night hawk accomplice in crime has also made his appearance. Wilhelm Gramatski, a merchant of Stettin, fell in with a smooth-spoken stranger on the Friedrichstrasse, the nocturnal Bowery of Berlin, and accompanied the stranger to a cafe, where he was introduced to three friends. In the early morning hours the party drove in a cab to the Tiergarten, where the merchant from the provinces was picked clean of 10,000 marks and his jewelry, the cabby, according to the police report, watching the proceedings "neutrally."

Two taxicab chauffeurs and the night porter of a nearby hotel calmly watched a band of burglars break into a store and load their booty into a wagon, which one of the band guarded with a drawn revolver. Though it was daylight, five in the morning, neither the chauffeurs nor the night porter alarmed the police. They "feared the revenge of the bandits," they said.

"WELL-DRESSED STRANGER"

One Bruno Orlowski, a merchant, was walking in the neighborhood of Berlin's Fishmarket at 9 p.m. when he was accosted by a "well-dressed stranger," and continued walking down the street with him, until suddenly a sergeant, accompanied by two soldiers in uniform, stopped the two men and declared the merchant under arrest.

The sergeant showed his military papers, but declined to state the grounds for the arrest. The "well-dressed stranger" said it would all prove to be a mistake and offered to accompany his chance acquaintance as a witness, suggesting that since it was all a mistake they would do well to attract as little attention as possible. The soldiers took the two civilians to the railroad station, put them on a train and took them to the suburb of Hirschgarten, where the staff of their military outfit who had "ordered the arrest" was supposed to be located.

Decoyed into the woods near the railroad station, the merchant was felled by a rifle butt and robbed of 1,000 marks and his jewelry. The sergeant, the two soldiers and the "well-dressed stranger" fired a few shots at the merchant as he staggered to his feet and began calling for help, and then ran. All the police were able to ascertain was that the band had boarded a train back to the Friedrichstrasse, Berlin.

Money Cannot Buy More

It's made a real hit, and no wonder with such a beautiful Crepe de Chine. Hand-made, pure, in its original shade, it is offered to you in one piece, ten yards long and twenty six inches wide. Makes beautiful shirts. As a present for either sex what better article could you choose? There is sufficient Crepe in the piece to make the most beautiful dresses. For women's underwear it can't be beat. Think of the memories this Crepe brings to its owner. Think of the distance from whence it comes. Think of Marco Polo, of Kublai Kahn, of Kings, Queens and Millionaires. The richest people in the world cannot buy, any finer, more pliable, silk than this Crepe de Chine. The price of twenty dollars per piece is within reach of all. Send along your cheque or Chinese postal money order, and we will at once mail you one piece of Szechwan Crepe de Chine, postage free. If you really want to be keen, send her a piece of Crepe de Chine.

A Well-Merited Gift

WE commend to the attention of all thoughtful and patriotic Chinese the item which we publish today on page one, telling of the gift made to the University of Nanking College of Agriculture and Forestry by the Military and Civil governors of this province. Messrs. Li Shun and Chi Yao-lin have given $3,000 each to the University in recognition of the invaluable work that is being done there for the improvement of agriculture in China and as a help towards further work along the same lines.

The skill and industry of the Chinese farmer are so universally admired and praised that we are apt ordinarily to overlook the fact that his methods are likely to be quite out of date. He farms as his forefathers farmed. And what this leads to can be illustrated only by comparison. There are in the United States, for instance, approximately 7,000,000 farms operated by about 10,000,000 farmers. These farmers in 1917 produced $20,000,000,000 worth of food. They were able not only to feed all of their own people but they were able to send billions of dollars worth of food to Europe, food which not only saved Europe from starvation but brought back a rich return of money.

The American farmers were enabled to accomplish this wonderful result because they work scientifically and with modern implements. By the use of machines, plows, harvesters, tractors, etc., one of them is able to operate a farm that would keep a hundred Chinese farmers and their families fully occupied. But that isn't the only explanation of their amazing success. They have established agricultural colleges in every state where they and their sons and daughters are schooled in the most modern methods of farming, dairying and stock-raising. They also are taught how to test the various soils found on their farms in order that they may know in advance what crops will do best.

These farmers so manage themselves that they keep production always ahead of consumption and therefore are able to sell their surplus crops to other parts of the world and thus reap what are in the aggregate vast profits. They not only feed their own countrymen but they make their country rich by drawing to America the wealth of other lands. These 10,000,000 farmers must be a busy lot when one comes to think of it, for in addition to planting, caring for and harvesting their crops, they, as a side line, take care of 300,000,000 chickens, 67,000,000 cattle, 72,000,000 swine, 48,000,000 sheep, 22,000,000 horses, and 5,000,000 mules which latter probably give them more trouble than all the other animals put together.

Now what have the 250,000,000 Chinese farmers to put against that record of the American farmers. If 10,000,000 American farmers can produce $20,000,000,000 worth of food in one year, what ought the 250,000,000 Chinese farmers to produce? They do not, sad to say, produce enough to feed their own countrymen. They should, as a matter of fact, feed the whole Orient, and if they did this, their country would be well fed and prosperous. It was to bring about this latter happy situation that the University of Nanking College of Agriculture and Forestry was founded. It is doing a great work, which we hope will spread all over the land, and we congratulate our Military and Civil Governors on their recognition of it.

The Revel Of Luxury

Season's Record Of Money-Spending By Americans

By Remsen Crawford
(New York Times)

With the national debt climbing toward the thirty billion mark and the cost of the necessaries of life 80 percent higher than before the great world war, seven million dollars worth of diamonds are pouring into the country each month and are being rapidly purchased by a gaping trade; millions of dollars are wagered daily at the race tracks; automobiles are sold far in advance of the factory outp[ut]. Summer hotels, at rates rang[ing] from $7 to $25 a day, have rea[ped] the richest harvest of their [ex]istence; amusement resorts [are] making plutocrats of their [pa]tmoters; theaters are booking in [ad]vance, and "the pursuit of hap[pi]ness," so innocently fostered in [the] Constitution of our forefathers, [has] become hysteria with the luxu[ry]loving part of our population.

What follows is not a revelat[ion] of American prodigality. That [is] no new thing. It is simply a [re]cord of the high cost of luxury [in] connection with the high cost [of] living; a plain, strightforw[ard] annal of the dying Summer, [the] most extravagant season ever [ex]perienced on American soil.

The Vice-President of the Uni[ted] States began this story a fortni[ght] ago, but was interrupted by [an] interviewer. Mr. Marshall s[aid] with a delicate thread of sarca[sm] that he had often felt tempted [to] go on strike because the pleasu[res] of life now cost too much for [a] man in "a lazy job" like his. [Ap]parently, he said, the only reme[dy] would be for a Vice-President [to] strike for an increase in salary.

If luxury and leisure have c[on]spired to set a pace of mor[e] spending hitherto undreamed [of] this dissipation hitherto ascrib[ed] so exclusively to New York s[o]ciety has become diffused and ge[n]eral. There is nothing section[al] about the exuberance of toda[y]. Vacationists from the smaller citi[es] of the South and West have vi[ed] with the man from Wall Street [in] the distribution of easily acquir[ed] wealth. There is nothing in it t[o] rekindle class hatred, so effectually effaced during the period of th[e] war, for the reason that there i[s] "class' now among the masses. Railroad wage-earners boasted [a] two-million-dollar relief fund befor[e] hinting of a strike. The man fro[m] the forge is buying diamond[s] clerks bet a cool thousand on t[he] races, and the farmer who h[as] not already bought an automob[ile] is planning to do so with the sin[g]ing of the next harvest song.

Where does the money co[me] from? That's a question th[at] borders on somebody else's bu[si]ness. But there will be millions [of] Americans, young and old, ma[le] and female, who will be sayi[ng] good-bye to their Liberty bon[ds]. Indeed, the activities of the [big] papers in the bond market durin[g] the last few months have already been taken by astute and circumspect financiers as furnishing the explanation of the source of the rivers of gold which have been flowing about the pedestal of pleasure.

More than 350 splendid hotels have been planned for construction before next Summer in all parts of the country. The building of many of them is already under way, the cost ranging from $7,000,000 down. Not a few of these luxurious establishments will cost a million dollars, or thereabouts, each. It is in this field that much of the money has been and is being spent. There is no better authority upon hotel conditions in America, perhaps, than Jack Ball, editor of the technical section of the Hotel Review. Mr. Ball has just returned from a tour of the country from coast to coast; he attended on his outward journey the Greeters' convention in Portland, Ore., the Greeters' being an association of hotel clerks who stand "out front" and greet the guests. Returning eastward, he was present at the hotel men's show and convention in Chicago. He called upon hotel men in St. Paul, Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Grand Canyon, Albuquerque, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, Denver, Manitou, Wichita, Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, Cleveland, and Rochester.

All over the country Mr. Ball found a condition of prosperity for hotels never approached in the past. Particularly have the fashionable resorts of the West prospered, for there have been no rainy periods there to interfere with the business as in the case of the Eastern hotels. "Although the hotel rates have been steadily advancing to keep pace with the high cost of living," said Mr. Ball "the leading hotels of the country have found it difficult to find rooms for the tens of thousands of guests that have been coming in an unprecedented stream all Summer long in every section of the country, and particularly at the Summer resorts."

In many parts of the country the overflows of motorists have resorted to a plan of accommodation over night which is a novelty in the hotel business, known as "the auto-camp." On pleasure bent, they take with them tents and cots for themselves and families, and, finding no rooms at the hotels of a resort, they are directed to the nearest auto-camp. There they find a shed built in the woods for their automobiles, and a secluded place for pitching their tents. They sleep in their tents and use the hotels for their meals and other necessities and pleasures like regular guests.

It would be impossible to estimate the fortunes that have been spent at the American Summer resorts during the season. The profits would be so bewildering if

But hundreds of thousands of dollars have been pivoted upon the turn of the cards, or upon the illusory circumventions of the little roulette ball. Bridge and poker, likewise have lost none of their charm at the Summer resorts because of the high cost of living. Don't fancy for a moment that the players are exclusively from among the affluent and conspicuous families of New York. The truth is, that it has been a new crowd of unfamiliar faces at many of the resorts this year, people who have come from various towns and cities, and even from the farms, just as the old Southern planters used to gather at Saratoga each Summer and bet their bales of cotton or barns of tobacco. The higher the cost of luxury, the deeper is the plunge, and this year there have been plungers from every walk of life.

Something has already been told through the press of the increase in the sales of jewelry since the war. Even now when remedies for the high cost of living are being sought by the State and Federal authorities it is perfectly bewildering to view the crowds of purchasers of high-priced jewelry in the leading shops of this hitherto exclusive trade. People are buying diamonds who never bought them before and who know little of their standardised value.

"It has been one continuous Christmas season all Summer," said T. Edger Wilson, editor of the Jeweler's Circular, official organ of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade, alluding to the trade.

"Nobody in the business has ever seen anything like it before. It is nothing short of hysteria, the way everybody is buying jewelry. And it is not cheap jewelry, either. It is the real jewelry—jewelry that enables one to carry a fortune in one's hand. As all jewelers know, there have always been two main seasons of sale, Christmas and Easter, but there has been no let up at all this year. Men, women, and children of all conditions of life are putting money in diamonds and other precious stones. Frankly, I do not believe it is entirely due to the vanity of wearing jewels. I believe many of these people who are now purchasing real diamonds are doing so with a view to investment, or saving. They have been made acquainted with the fact that a diamond will always hold its value and pass current as cash. They know that a diamond can be pawned for cash on the spur of the moment to bridge over a tight pinch. Economy during the war, perhaps, is putting its savings in jewelry instead of into the banks."

Not many of the yachts which were lent by men of wealth to the Government during the war have as yet been put into commission. This is one luxury which has been handicapped by the high cost of everything. It required from $3,000 to $20,000 a month for upkeep of a yacht before the war, depending upon the size of the craft and the number of the crew. The wages demanded by sailors since the war are around $100 a month. One of the larger yachts, like J. P. Morgan's Corsair, requires about forty members in the crew. The cost of feeding the crew, too, has increased three times over the former cost, while the cost of fuel and other necessaries of yachting must be added.

A good many of the smaller yachts appeared at Larchmont and other meets, however, this season, and it is very important to note that it isn't the mere matter of cost that has kept the yachts out of this great game of extravagance. Orders have been placed with the designers for building new yachts which will keep them busy for more than a year to come. Included in these orders are specifications for some very large and luxurious ones. Every yachtsman is making ready for the international championship races next year, and the money he would otherwise have expended on upkeep this Summer is being put into preparations for extended indulgence in the sport next year.

Pleasure, pleasure! Who can turn churlishly from all these contemplations of luxury and give heed to the cry about the high cost of living? Who can take seriously the wail of hard times when blacksmiths are joining the jeweled ranks?

Is this the America that stopped every wheel just one year ago when the government needed gasoline?

Book Chat

By Heywood Broun
(New York Tribune)

Even if "'In the Sweet Dry and Dry" (Boni-Liveright), by Christopher Morley and Bert Haley, were not, on the whole, an excellent burlesque, we should still be its violent partisan, because it marks a bold attempt to fight the modern disregard for the pun. Usually, we suspect the good faith of people who assure us that they are distressed by puns. They are recruited from the mendacious ranks of those who assert that they "can never see anything funny in Charlie Chaplin." We feel convinced that not to like Chaplin or puns is an acquired taste. Such people grow up to be sheer snobs who refuse corned beef and cabbage and passes to the Polo Grounds.

To be sure, not all the puns of "In the Sweet Dry and Dry" are good. Some are fearful and yet, by some curious twist, it has always seemed to us that next to a good pun nothing is quite so amusing as a bad pun. Only the middling good ones are unacceptable. Frank Tinney with his joke about "berth control" and Ed Wynn with his story of the young lady who sought advice from the cigar store man "because he knew all the ropes" have demonstrated the commercial value of the bad pun. If the same tendency holds good among the reading public "In the Sweet Dry and Dry" should be enormously successful.

We need only submit a few samples: "The Bishop has what may be denominated a single-tract mind." "'Since we are to be slaves,' they said, 'at least let's have some serf bathing.'" "Chuff has put us here under the pretext of being drunk. Very well: then let us be drunk. Let us go down in our cups, not in our saucers."

The heroine of the book is Miss Theodolinda Chuff, who describes herself as an alcoholic medium. "It is the latest and most superior form of spiritualism. By gazing upon crystal—particularly upon an empty tumbler—I am able to throw myself into a trance in which I can communicate with departed spirits. A good drink does not die, you know; its soul hovers radiantly on the twentieth plane, and through the occult power of a medium those who loved it in life can get in touch with it once more. Through these trances of mine I have been privileged to put many bereaved ones in communication with their dear departed spirits. To hear the table-rappings and the shouts of ecstasy you would perceive that a great deal of the anguish of separation is assuaged." One of Miss Chuff's most faithful disciples is Virgil Quimbleton, who always seeks psychical communication with Wurzburger. He refers affectionately to the medium as his "Little Jean Dark."

"But the popular theory of the cockney," writes Thomas Burke in "Out and About London," "most effectively exploded when he is seen in a dramatic situation or in some moment of emotional stress. He does not then call 'Gorblimey' or 'Comartovit' or some current persiflage of the day; or stand reticent and monosyllabic, as some superior writers depict him, but, from some atavistic cause, harks back to the speech of forgotten Saxon forefathers."

It may be so with the cockney, but St. John Ervine testifies to exactly the opposite in regard to the Irish. If we may judge by "John Ferguson," an Irishman meets an emotional crisis with "It looks like rain."

Dr. Sun Yat-sen's 'Political Philosophy'

Volume I: 'It Is Easy To Do But Hard To Know'

By Lin Li-yen

IN these turbulent times when the North and the South seem never to get out of their entangling disputes, which have constantly plunged both into armed strife, it is a rare wonder for us to greet the appearance of such a serene and profound work as the first volume of Dr. Sun Yat-sen's "Political Philosophy," entitled "Easy to do but hard to know." Such a work as this seems rather to have been written in the camps of philosophers in Plato's time than in the midst of the cannonading battlefield, where the author is at the same time the guiding spirit of all operations. There is an amazing calmness in the tone that pervades the whole book.

Not less surprising is his philosophic thought, which gradually advances to the infinite depth of abstraction. If we should just step forward to ponder how important a place the author occupies at this time in the arena of internal dissension and consider what foreshadowing influence he can cast to determine the fate of the nation, we would be able to appreciate with more propriety the value of the work and the high character of him who prefers rather such a quiet pursuit and sacrifices all vainglory and power to contribute to its production.

The idea that he, who has been renowned for the part he has taken for the revolutionary cause and whose work has been crowned with the establishment of a republic after the ideal, should now give up all his connection with the revolutionary government of Canton and retire to a solitary nook of Shanghai, is beyond general expectation. That he, who has been accustomed to an active life, has generated chaos and spread disorder and has constantly been engaged in the work of destruction and reconstruction, should now take up a scholarly pursuit so different from the character of a warrior and contrary to the spirit of arrogant militarism and intriguing politics, deserves our admiration. Furthermore that he who has never before been known for any extraordinary literary gift nor for any philosophical endowment, should have wrought out a new system in metaphysics and should lay out before the world a doctrine which has never before struck even the most subtle minds of philosophers, and which correct the accepted maxims of Confucius and Mencius, has taken the world by surprise. Many have termed themselves "accomplished scholars" or styled themselves "literary magnates." Many have gone so far as to try to curry fame abroad by their recent European travels. But this little book of Sun Yat-sen's puts all to shame.

That "it is easier to do than to know" has indeed been an accepted principle among the Chinese since time immemorial. Every one has taken it for granted that what we know is by far not that which we can carry out. Conversely we can count only what we have done as the fruit of our knowledge. This idea has rooted so firmly in the minds of the Chinese that it would permit no alteration. Many ancient philosophers have attempted to recast this system of thinking and rebuild a new foundation for metaphysical contemplation. Not one succeeded in lifting up the piteous sluggard victims of this old maxim out of inertia that pervades in their whole mental constitution. Despondent of any further success in his salvation work, Confucius, for instance, admitted a compromise by shaping his theory adaptable to the mind of the general mass, saying: "We should appreciate [redacted] brought to the same scale. It is now "neither easier to know nor harder to do." "It is as easy to do as to know" or conversely.

This new theory of Wang Yang-ming's created a new Japan. It remodels all her system of thinking in such a manner as to adapt the onward move of time and civilisation. Four hundred years have elapsed, since this teaching set Japan to revived activity; and Japan has now reaped her world renown through it.

But the present era marks another turn in the movement of the world's civilisation. By the crushing of Prussian militarism at this universal war, the foundation upon which the whole system of Japanese politics is built, is somewhat shaken. At the sight of the eventful fate of Prussian autocracy, the Japanese policy of "iron fist" cannot help tumbling down before the onward rush of an irresistible new current in the world's civilisation.

It is this which leads Dr. Sun Yat-sen to choose another way in remodeling the old system of thinking in China. He begins by flinging aside that Macchivellian policy of Japan of the mediaeval times and establishes a brand-new, up-to-date set of learning which moves with the present tendency of the world's civilisation. "It is easy to do what we wish," so philosophises the revolutionary leader; "even to create, out of the old, crumbling empire, a new nation that commands awe and veneration of the world." But to know exactly after what model we should have our nation to be cast is a problem which has proved trying and perplexing to many philosophers of state. Prussia wanted a military nation and she obtained it. Japan recast her national system after the Prussian model, and she attained it. Both have done what they thought they should do. But is it what the Chinese ought to strive to do? Or should they, first of all, try to learn to know what they should do before doing. This has been a question pending in the minds of many like Dr. Sun Yat-sen who shoulder the national affairs unwearily and undauntedly. If China should attempt to act precipitately without knowing what she should do, her own action will bring forth her own destruction.

People often reprimand Dr. Sun Yat-sen as being a radical leader, who goes to extreme actions. But this new political theory of his will soon correct the mistaken popular impression. This sermon given to warn his followers against headstrong acts is sufficient to maintain his standing as a contemplative, conservative leader.

From this new doctrine, it is obvious, too, that the revolutionary leader shrinks from no hard task that would bring good fruit to his nation. For to him, nothing is too difficult. It is only to try to know the right thing to do that not seldom puzzles him. It is this scruple about the advisability of the things that his fellow-partisans are now doing in Canton that leads him to retire entirely from an active life in that political center to a solitary nook in Shanghai and now even to resign his post as one of the seven chief executive officers of the Military Government.

The author of the new political theory is totally a man of action, in the best sense of that word, and not merely a man of theories. He is a practical roundabout man in every respect. What he knows to be worth doing he would do with undivided devotion. Even though there is a wide gap between the Northern party and his, which would seem to many to be utterly impossible of being bridged over, Dr. Sun Yat-sen will, no doubt, be [redacted]

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper (Registered Trade Mark)

is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

Arkansas Pride

(From The Arkansas Thomas Cat)

Arkansas is a Southern state. Arkansas is a Democratic commonwealth. Arkansas is a Gibraltar of the party. Both houses of the Arkansas Legislature ratified the suffrage amendment. In the Senate the vote was 29 to 2 and in the House it was 76 to 19. Arkansas is the twelfth state to ratify the proposed amendment and the second of the Southern states to take this action. Governor Brough championed ratification and two Democratic United States Senators threw the weight of their influence for ratification. Texas led off. Arkansas followed the lead. Now Oklahoma will ratify, and Oklahoma is a Democratic state.

More Enemies Within

(From The Toledo Blade)

It has been noticeable in our recent controversy, with Mexico that that nation has a great number of friends in the United States. They not only defend our neighbor, holding her up as a pattern of sweetness and light, but at the same time they paint Uncle Sam as a crook and a horse thief. Whether it is of significance or not these stout defenders of Mexican outlawry were a year or so ago stoutly standing up for Prussia. Their admirations may swing around the compass, but they are consistently against America.

School Girl Love Turns To Tragedy

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

She was married when a mere girl in her second year at high school.

Her husband, a harum scarum lad little older than herself, deserted her almost immediately. She fell into ill-health, and since her family no longer recognised her or would have anything to do with her, and since she had neither money nor friends, the only refuge open to her was the public hospital of a neighboring city.

For weeks she was desperately ill, and during that time her baby died from lack of nourishment and the care which under other circumstances she would have given it.

When she finally left the institution she found herself facing the world alone and penniless, still weak and broken from the sorrow and suffering through which she had passed.

She was a country girl utterly unsophisticated in the ways of the world, and as the daughter of well-to-do parents had never been obliged to work and so was without any sort of training or vocation. A weaker spirit would have surrendered and gone down before the stark hopelessness of the future.

BEGAN NEW CAREER

But she pluckily gathered the shreds and fragments of her life together, and started in to make a new career.

"After my discharge from the hospital," she writes me, "I secured a position as a servant and worked for four months in order to secure enough money to repay the burial expenses of my baby and to cover my railway fare to another city where I was absolutely unknown.

"There, after various vicissitudes, I finally obtained the chance to enter a large and well-known hospital as a probationer, and with hard study eventually completed the course and was graduated as a trained nurse.

"About this time I received the report of my husband's death in an automobile accident, and since there was no longer any obstacle in the way I accepted the attentions and ultimately married a very fine young man with whom I had become acquainted. There were no secrets between us; I told him frankly and fully my whole history, and he was big enough to overlook my follies and mistakes and take me as I was.

"You can imagine my consternation and despair, therefore, when I tell you that about three months ago while engaged in Red Cross work at a base hospital I was assigned to duty one night in a ward filled with returned soldiers, and upon the first chart that I examined I found the name of my former husband.

"Hoping against hope that there might be some mistake, I made inquiries regarding the identity of the man, only to become more and more convinced that it must be he. Then at last summoning all my courage, I stole over and looked down at him. There could no longer be any question or doubt. It was the husband I had married in my girlhood.

"Ever since my days have been a dream of horror. My heart is broken. I dare not tell my husband, and I have no one else to whom I can turn. I do not know what to do. I can expect no relief or assistance from my people, I am sure. I have never heard from them since I left home, and I have been told that my name is never mentioned by them. They are very religious and they will never forgive me for having, as they consider, brought disgrace upon them.

MELODRAMA IN IEAL LIFE

"Why should I be so bitterly condemned? Why must I be so heavily punished? I have always tried to help every human being in my power, spending freely of both my time and money; but now when I need help myself there seems no one to whom I can appeal."

And there is a bit of real life which if I were to put it in a novel would be sharply criticised as melodramatic and unconvincing. I would be accused of stretching the long arm of coincidence to an unjustifiable limit.

I am told that if the facts are as she states them, the absence and silence of her first husband for over seven years, even without the report of the automobile accident which came to her, gives a reasonable presumption of his death and automatically releases her from any tie which bound her to him.

Her second marriage is quite as valid and her children as fully protected as if the news on which she acted had been true. The accidental turning up of this undesirable Enoch Arden at so late a date does not affect the matter in the slightest degree. She should, however, confide at once in her husband and have him consult an attorney so that the necessary legal steps may be taken to have the record made clear without undue publicity or gossip.

Dismal Days For Jack

But he didn't eat pudding or pie;
No raisin or plum adhered to his thumb,

What Is The Model Husband?

By Winifred Black

The ideal husband has had to get a divorce from his wife. He's a good deal bewildered by it. He's been married for five years, and in all that time his wife has never once had breakfast ready for him in the morning.

He's had breakfast ready for her.

At night when he came home from his work and found his little flat empty and dusty—the dishes standing dirty in the kitchen, the bed unmade, half the clothes that the two of them owned scattered from one end of the place to the other—what did he do? Put on his hat and go out to a cafe to dinner with a lot of gay companions?

Did he ring up someone he used to know—a rather agreeable girl—and ask her to dine with him?

Not he!

He took off his coat and washed the dishes, and dried them and put them away. He made the bed and swept the little living room, and cooked the dinner, and when his wife came home there he was smiling at the door.

And, after that, she ran away and left him.

The worst of it was she ran away with the man's best chum, who never cooked a meal for himself in his life, and wouldn't sew on one of his own buttons or brush his own hat, or get his own collars ready for the laundry, for any woman who ever lived.

I wonder if there's anything queer about all this?

I can't see, can you?

I know I ought to be awfully sorry for the poor man who has been deserted, but somehow—

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

Once a dog came to our house and tried to adopt us.

He was a pretty dog as dogs go, and when I first saw him I rather liked him, but he had the hatefulest way of falling over on his back and holding up his paws as if he expected to be kicked—no, it didn't make me sorry for him, it made me want to kick him.

And we didn't keep him—we couldn't. He was too hard on our sympathies.

But when an impudent rascal of an Irish terrier swaggered into the garden one day and dared us to put him out Aunt Mary got him a bone and Grandma got him a cooky, and Sister Susie put some water in a pan for him, and little Joe took an old coat and made a bed for him in the basement, and when the man of the house came home the terrier ran out and called the whole landscape to witness that that strange man would never get into that garden except over the terrier's dead body—not if he could help it.

And the man of the house said, "Some dog!" And we adopted the Irish terrier, and he ruled us joyously for years.

I don't believe any one ever really likes either a dog or a man or a woman who acts afraid to breathe—do you?

If I had a husband who would let me race to the matinee and bridge parties while he came home and did the work it was my business to do, I wouldn't love him for it at all—I'd despise him.

"Model husband?" What is a model husband, anyhow? A man who lets his wife made a fool of herself—and him?

What is a model wife? A woman who allows her husband to dominate her so she can't call her soul her own?

I know a man who has browbeaten and terrorised and insulted his whole family for years, and I heard that man say to a room full of people that he didn't see what he had ever done to have such a family of nothings and nobodies wished onto him.

He hated them for the very thing he himself had created in them.

Of course the woman who ran away from the model husband is a bad woman, but somehow I can't blame her very much for wanting to get away, can you?

HUMAN WORM

Self-respect, honest pride, reason, common sense, these things are not among the qualities we hear about when schoolgirls rave over the kind of man they hope to marry. But, dear me, I do believe they have a whole lot to do in making marriage possible, don't you?

I know a woman who lets her own daughter make fun of her, right to her very face. Poor thing, I suppose she thinks her daughters love her for her meekness. She doesn't realise that every time she permits an impertinent word from her own children, she is lowering not only herself but them, and some day they will see it, and despise her for her lack of courage and decent self-assertion.

Worms are all right in a garden—they say they help to loosen up the soil—but somehow I never like to look at a worm, do you?

History Repeats Itself

Briggs and Fowler were talking of the great wars fought in the days when the world was considerably younger. "You know," said Briggs, "it always seems to me that those old warriors were very much like our modern financiers." "What do you mean?" asked Fowler. "Well, they were always investing some one else's capital, weren't they?"

The March Of Intellect

A voluble orator was addressing a crowd. "Progress," he cried, "is the great idea of the present age! We are wiser than our fathers were, and our fathers were wiser than their fathers." "Say, mister," cried one of his hearers, "what an ignoramus your grandfather must have been!"

At A Disadvantage

There had been unpleasant words before between the dramatist and a leading comedian as to the latter's habit of adding impromptu jokes to his part. "There's no need for you to gag," said the dramatist angrily, after the comedian had done it again. "Your part as written is quite funny enough. All you've got to do is to say the words and wait for the audience to laugh." The comedian did not look convinced. "That's all right for you," he grumbled. "You live in town and can afford the time. But don't forget that I have to catch the midnight train to my place in the suburbs, and I can't wait till the audience laughs!"

A Gloomy Outlook

Father—"Why do you wish to leave school and go to work when you're so young?" Son—"It's this way, dad. School is going to be a tough place for the next few years. We shall have a new map of Europe to study, and if we fail the teacher is likely to give us the Constitution of the League of Nations to learn by heart!"

How To Treat Poison Ivy

By Brice Belden, M. D.

Inflammation of the skin due to poison ivy makes itself manifest as small round blisters seated upon an intensely red base and attended with itching and burning. There is more or less swelling of the inflamed skin. The hands and face are usual sites of this type of inflammation.

When the face is severely attacked the great swelling causes temporary disfigurement. When the hands are intensely affected the swelling produces a clubbing of the fingers and a great thickening of other parts.

The susceptibility of some individuals is so great that mere proximity of the plants produces the disease. Others are so immune as to be able to handle them with impunity.

In some very mild cases nothing but redness makes its appearance, with slight burning and itching.

Occasionally the blisters become infected and pus instead of watery serum is seen to fill them.

The disease is acute, terminating favorably in a few weeks. When persistent it may eventuate in eczema.

A solution of permanganate of potash (3 grains to the pint) is a most satisfactory means of treatment. The involved parts are freely moistened with the solution at intervals of about two hours, the solution meantime being allowed to dry on the parts. This treatment usually controls the acute symptoms.

Chloride of ammonium, in a lotion of the strength of one ounce to three quarts of water, is an efficient remedy in this condition. Black wash also has its partisans (one drachm of calomel to one pint of lime water), as has Epsom salts in saturated solution. Still another useful application is a wash composed of eight grains of sugar of lead to the pint of alcohol.

Ointments should not be used, as they spread the poisonous oil and increase the irritation.

A Difficulty

The day of churches "beyond denominations" is here, and we give herewith another example of pressing on the good work: The Mayor of a far inland town was about to engage a preacher for the new church.

"Parson, ye aren't by any chance a Baptist, be ye?"

"No, not necessarily. Why?"

"Wal, I was just a-goin' to say we have to haul our water twelve miles."

Safety First

"Why do you want to sell this mule, Uncle Ned?"

"Boss, I wants to git rid o' dat mule."

"Of course you do, but why?"

"Well, hit's dis way. I done got de rheumatism an' 'sides I ain't as spry as I used to be, nohow. If I keeps foolin' roun' dat mule, some o' dese days he's gwine to kick whar I is an' I'se gwine to be dar."

TONDEUSE-RASOIR

The TONDEUSE-RASOIR is the only hair clipping device which trims the hair as close to the surface of the skin and as perfectly as a razor.

The TONDEUSE-RASOIR combines the advantage of a fine blade razor and of hair clippers without the disadvantage of employing soap.

The TONDEUSE-RASOIR can be used for several years without changing the cutting combs and without needing to be sharpened.

The TONDEUSE-RASOIR does not need a strop, cup, soap or brush.

The TONDEUSE-RASOIR comes as a blessing to Ladies as it keeps the underarm and the legs white and smooth.

PREMIER BRATIANO REBUKES ALLIES

Calls Policy Toward Rumania Adopted By Supreme Council Dangerous

NEW NOTE TO HIM CORDIAL

But Insists That Engagements Entered Into Must Be Kept

Paris, September 5.—J. J. C. Bratiano, Rumanian Premier, has advised Nicholas Misu, Rumanian representative here, of the receipt of the latter's despatch advising him that the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference had prohibited shipment of arms and war material from Hungary to Rumania. The telegram declares that notes sent to Bucharest by the Supreme Council have not been received, and asks M. Misu to especially call the attention of the Supreme Council to "the dangerous and pernicious character of the policy it has adopted toward Rumania."

"The Rumanian Government is absolutely convinced," the telegram continues, "that in destroying Bolshevism in Hungary it has rendered eminent service to the Allied cause. As a consequence of the conditions imposed upon Rumania, without taking account of her sacrifices of men and materials, the Rumanian Government may be obliged to consider the advantages of withdrawing her troops across the Dvina, in Southern Russia, and declining all responsibility for the chaos to which that part of Europe may be reduced by the dissensions of the Bolsheviki, Royalists, and Reactionaries."

The note of the Supreme Council which Sir George R. Clerk of the British Foreign Office is carrying to Bucharest is couched in firm but cordial language, according to the Petit Parisien today. It says the communication recalls to the Rumanian Cabinet the engagements it had entered into and sets forth the necessity of their being kept.

It is said by the Journal that Sir George is taking with him the seventy-five radiograms which the Rumanian delegation is reported to have declared were sent from Paris to the Rumanian Government within the last two weeks but none of which reached its destination, Rumania claiming a similar failure of the various Allied notes to reach her. As to the new Allied note, the Journal says it declares the Peace Conference considers Rumania as a faithful friend, expresses the wish that its Government will not detach itself from the body of the Allies, requests explanations on various points, asks that Rumania evacuate Hungary speedily and meanwhile cease requisitioning supplies, while putting the material already requisitioned at the disposal of the Allies for the purpose of making a just division of it or its equivalent among the various nations having claims against Hungary. The note is said to end by asking Rumania to co-operate with the Allies in re-establishing order in Hungary.

Sir George's departure for Bucharest with the note has been set for Monday.

It was the failure of the wireless transmission to work properly that caused Rumania's silence regarding the notes of the Supreme Council, according to information that developed today. The defect was not discovered until Wednesday of this week, when the first of the messages got through by rail. Railway communication had been interrupted since the occupation of Budapest by the destruction of a bridge or the line. The route was reopened recently, but no news from Paris reached Buehrarest over it until after 3,700 freight cars had passed across the bridge.
